

The Motoka – Theo Luzuka

You see that Benzi sitting at the riche's end?

Ha! That motoka is motoka

It belongs to the minister of Fairness

Who yesterday was loaded with a Doctorate

At Makerere with whisky and I do not know what

Plus I hear the literate thighs of an undergraduate

You see those market women gapping their mouths?

The glory of its inside has robbed them of words,

I tell you the feather seats the gold steering

The TV the radio station the gear!

He can converse with all world presidents

While driving in the back seat with his darly

Between his legs without the driver seeing a thing! ha! ha! ha!

Look at the driver chasing the children away

They want to see the pistol in the door pocket

Or the button that lets out the bullets from the machine

Through the eyes of the car-sshhhhhhhhhhhhhhhhhh!

Let's not talk about it

But I tell you that motoka can run
It sails like a lyato, speeds like a swallow
And does not know anyone stupid on its way
The other day I heard-
But look at its behind, that mother of twins!
A-ah! That motoka is motoka
You just wait, I will tell you more
But let me first sell my tomatoes.
